Model Answer:

WORK LIFE FOR TEENAGERS

Can you imagine a life without work? People must work to continue their life. Not only adults, but also teenagers can work, so their lives can become very comfortable. Having a job provides a lot of opportunities. In my opinion, teenagers should have jobs while they are studying because they can have extra money, they can learn more about life and working is a good motivator for them.
To begin with, if teenagers have a job, they can have extra money. They can save the money which they have earned, and thus invest in their future. For example, if they save money for their future they might spend it for their education or lives. In addition, they can help their family if they work. For instance, they may pay one of the bills. Lastly, they can spend their money on personal things such as going shopping and going on different courses. They can use this money for school expenses.

Additionally, if teenagers work, they learn more about life. Firstly, they come across difficulties that they have never met before and can try to cope with them. Moreover, they gain good habits by working. For example, they learn to be responsible and punctual. Also, they develop interpersonal skills and relationships because they have to communicate with lots of people every day.

Above all, working even part time could be a motivator for teenagers. Since working is not very easy for that age they would understand the difficulty of earning money maybe at a low paying job so they would definitely study harder at school to be a better student in order to get a good job in the future. When teenagers are motivated at school they will be busy with their lessons so they will keep themselves out of trouble. Additionally, as we all know, if a student is motivated he/she will do better in exams. Therefore, they may have the possibility to be accepted by better universities in the future. Hence, they will shape their future themselves.

To sum up, I strongly believe that teenagers should have jobs while they are studying because of earning extra money, learning more about life and motivating factors. Shortly, teenagers should work to be successful in life.
