DIABETES AND DEPRESSION

Apart from its physical consequences on the human body, diabetes also has an impact on the psyche of people living with the condition. It has been clearly shown that there is a relationship between depression and diabetes and that people with diabetes are especially at risk of mental distress, particularly depression. (1 ... ) About one in every four people with diabetes will suffer from depression.

It has been found to be more common in women and those with longer duration of diabetes. What makes people with diabetes more prone to developing depression is unclear at present. (2 ...)

Depression is a serious chronic medical condition that affects thought, feelings, and the ability to function in everyday life. Apart from affecting the quality of life, it is known that depression in people with diabetes is associated with poor blood sugar control, poor self management and untimely death. Depression leads to poor physical and mental functioning. The combined presence of diabetes and depression in an individual portends a serious danger.

Depression is thought to impact negatively on diabetes majorly through its negative effects on self care which is the core of diabetes management. So, such people develop diabetes complications more than those who face their situation with more zest; enthusiasm and energy. Similarly, as the duration of diabetes increases and diabetes complications develop, the risk of becoming depressed also increases. The diagnosis of diabetes is a major life stress. (3 ... )

The symptoms of depression in a person with diabetes include the following; depressed mood, diminished interest in daily activities, significant weight loss or gain, decreased appetite, loss of energy, feelings of worthlessness and guilt, sadness that is worse in the morning, reduced ability to concentrate and make decisions, and recurrent thoughts of death or suicide. (4. ...) The earlier treatment is started for depression, the better it is for the person.

Depression in the person with or without diabetes is easily treatable. Visits to a clinical psychologist for psychotherapy, to a psychiatrist, and the use of antidepressant medications are very necessary in this instance. Antidepressant medications may take some weeks before their beneficial effects become visible. (5...)

One recent scientific finding that relates to the type of diet consumed by those with or without diabetes shows that eating a diet rich in fruits, nuts, vegetables, olive oil, legumes and fish is not only healthy for the heart but is also very good for one's mental wellbeing.

Effectively managing depression is known to also help in bringing the blood sugar under control. People with diabetes should visit their health care giver who will be able to screen them for depression. After being tested, they can be treated easily.

I. However it is thought to be due to the stressful effect of the illness on the body and the likely effects of high blood sugar on the brain.
II. This has been proven by scientific studies which have shown that those with diabetes have a greater risk of developing depression than those without it.
III. The combination of these two modes of treatment has been found to improve the wellbeing of people with depression.
IV. The development of depression in people with diabetes is thought to be due to stress and a high level of the stress hormone called cortisol.
V. Some may also experience inability to sleep or wake up early, restlessness and irritability.
VI. Diabetes UK is the largest organization working for people with diabetes, funding research, campaigning and helping people live with the condition.

HOW TO PLANT A TREE ON A SLOPE

Trees are one of the best things you can add to a slope to help prevent erosion. The roots will spread through the soil, holding it in place. One of the notable differences between planting on level grade versus planting on a slope is the depth of the root ball. There are a couple of things you should do to make sure your tree survives living on the slanted surface.

Step 1

Mark the spot where you wish to plant your tree. Half of the hole will be in the hill and the other half you will extend straight out, on top of the surface of the slope. Mark a spot a little more than half the width of the root ball, straight up on the slope.

Step 2

Dig straight down at the center point to the depth of your root ball, placing the soil on the slope below the hole, packing it down as you go. For instance, if you have a root ball that is 18 inches high, you will need to dig down 18 inches to keep the same soil line as the tree had in the nursery.

Step 3

Remove the soil on the hill starting at the high point mark that you made earlier. Come straight down to where you have already dug, placing the removed dirt on the pile on the slope.

Step 4

Remove the container the tree is housed in and set the tree in place. Loosen any visible roots that may have started to spiral around and hold the tree straight up and down, using a level if necessary.

Step 5

Fill in the soil around the roots, tamping it down with the heel of your boot as you go. By the time the whole root ball is covered, half if it should be in line with the slope and the other covered by soil on the outcrop you formed below the hole.

Step 6

Form a swale on the slope just above the tree by removing an area of soil about 6 to 8 inches deep as wide as the tree to catch any rainwater. Smooth it out and pile the removed dirt on the outcropping hump below the tree.

Step 7

Mulch the tree heavily to hold the soil in place until the tree is established. Water the tree every day until you see signs of growth, unless you planted in the fall, in which case you should water daily for just about a week.

25. Why would you plant a tree on a slope?
- loosen tree roots in the soil
  - form a swale for outcropping
  - help prevent soil erosion
  - encourage level hill grading
26. The depth of your hole should be _____.
- the same size as the container
  - about six to eight inches deep
  - half the width of the root ball
  - as deep as the root ball is high
27. The purpose of a swale is to _____.
- remove root soil
  - prevent erosion
  - cover outcrops
  - hold rain water
28. Mulch holds _____.
- water over the tree
  - soil in place
  - trees on the slopes
  - trees planted in fall
29. In Step 5, the term be in line with means
- parallel to the slope
  - underneath the slope
  - above the slope
  - perpendicular to the slope
30. Why would you need a level?
- help loosen visible roots
  - remove the housed tree
  - make sure the tree is straight
  - keep the same soil line
